

School Board

England reminded the Committee that goals should be emphasized as something special to work toward, and not a reiteration of job descriptions. While Supt. John Maloney advised the Committee not to become too broad and ambitious in their goals, Hart said that it was not unreasonable to ask for uniformity in elementary reading programs. Walsh's three points were condensed to cover reading and listening skills.

The Committee voted unanimously to examine the possibility of expanding the Advanced Placement program for high school seniors.

Committee member Martha Gjestby suggested a goal to upgrade the Jr/Sr. high school level curriculum for the average student. She felt that students not in Advanced Placement or honors courses were not motivated enough in the regular college classes.

Supt. Maloney said that the problem lies with the studdents' own motivation, behavior and imagination and that it was not the part of the school, outside of homework assignments, to carry these qualities to the youngsters. The Committee agreed that there was no way to attack Gjestby's goal and that it needed more specificity.

Other topics under consideration as possible goals but not voted on included: that corridor duty by the staff be improved in the high school; that maintenance improve high school floors, the Deer Hill basement, the high school ladies rooms and the Joseph Osgood janitors' areas; and that the Guidance Department give information about Cohasset High School to college placement offices.

Help Sought For CHS Driveway

Superintendent John Maloney asked Selectmen last week to help alleviate a hazardous condition at the end of a driveway that adjoins the high school property with Pond Street.

Several accidents have occurred at the spot, Maloney said. Apparently vehicles approaching from the opposite direction experience a blind spot at the crest of the hill which makes it difficult for oncoming drivers to see each other.

Maloney suggested lowering the crest of the hill so that the direct line of sight would include a greater distance for vehicles approaching from the opposite direction. He also suggested widening the street for a 100 yards or so on either side of the driveway by using land on the high school side of Pond Street. A narrow island and caution light could be installed, he added, in the center of the widened area to help keep automobiles in their proper lanes.
